

winanggaay

Jirra Harvey/Max McGuire

6/16 September 2005

The Wiradjuri word 'winanggaay' translates into three actions, 'to know, to think, to understand'. As young Aboriginal artists we must think about our history, about where we have come from and what we are trying to achieve. We try to understand the cultural complexity that surrounds us and it is through this process that we know the strength of our own people.
