Laying down a path in walking

Tim Barrass
3/12 April 2001

Tim Barrass’ black and white images summon (not in any particular order) the following associations: A proliferation of bacteria in a petri dish.
The interconnected tracks of borers.
An infestation of tape worm in a dog’s gut.
The activity of a brain engaged with a memory or idea.
The behaviour of shoppers on boxing day.
Lightening unable to find ground.
A river’s tributaries.
A solar flare and a tangle of blackberry bushes.

Lee de Jong