

Tropic Entropic

Andy Hutson

20/30 May 2008

We are living in an era of permanent catastrophe: a relentless stream of real-time disasters bombards us daily from political crises to environmental cataclysm. Tropic Entropic proposes a local disaster of semiotic decay, in which Australia's landscape 'already reduced to a collection of absurd icons' gradually loses meaning as it is reduced to spectacular imitations.

Opening night: Wednesday 21 May 5/7pm