

Work

by eleanor voterakis

March / April 2003

Are our daily domestic routines and obligations merely the flipside of leisure? Or is it possible that 'work' can have value that is not defined by its relationship to 'free time' alone.